

What is this?

Find a picture
on the internet
that supports your hypothesis.

Insect tracks, likely from the Emerald Ash Borer. This destructive beetle has killed millions of ash trees across the US since its arrival in 2002 from Asia.

Invasive species arrive from other areas, and typically have no natural predators, thus they flourish.

Photo from Virginia Tech Daily

Photo from M& M Tree Care, Milwaukee, WI